U.S. Customs offices are located at Southern California Logistics Airport (SCLA) providing SCLA with a U.S. Customs Port of Entry. With the Port of Entry designation, SCLA offers its users the opportunity to import or export, manufacture, assemble, store and manipulate eligible merchandise in SCLA's Foreign Trade Zone without being subject to fees and taxes normally associated with the customs laws of the United States.

Additionally, businesses operating at SCLA can save valuable time by diverting their import or export goods being shipped or flown into congested Ports of Entry by bonding the imports and forwarding them to and from the SCLA Port of Entry. Coupled with its General Purpose Foreign Trade Zone Designation, the U.S. Customs benefits are realized when locating or expanding your business to the 1,954 acre Southern California Logistics Airport. These benefits create a cash flow savings for the manufacturer and allow companies to keep funds invested within their business operation.
